Communication Skills & Call Handling Skills

Communication Skills → Verbal (speaking clearly), Non-verbal (body language, eye contact), Written (emails, reports), Listening.

Call Handling Skills (important for customer service/BPO jobs):

- Greet warmly (e.g., "Good morning, this is Sam speaking, how may I assist you?").
- Listen actively, take notes.
- Speak clearly, politely, at moderate speed.
- Use positive language ("Certainly, let me help" instead of "No, can't do").
- Handle complaints calmly, empathize ("I understand your frustration").
- Confirm understanding, provide solutions, close politely.

Listening Skills

Listening is the most important (and often neglected) part of communication.

Types of Listening

Here are illustrations showing the different types of listening (active, passive, empathetic, comprehensive, critical):

Reading

Effective reading improves comprehension and vocabulary.

Here are examples of reading techniques (skimming vs scanning, note-taking):

Skimming VS Scanning

Skimming	Scanning
• -fast reading • -get main idea not all details. • -must leave out parts • -may leave out ½ to ¾ paragraph once you have the main idea of the paragraph • -comprehension is lower, try to comprehend as much as you can while reading at an average speed • -comprehend 50% of what you are reading • -twice as fast • -usually done with material you know nothing about • *note as speed increases, comprehension decreases	• -reading technique used when you want to locate a single fact or specific bit of information without reading every word • -eg scan TV listings in paper to find time of show • -phone directory when you want to see a show • -fast way to find info • -must be accurate in terms of finding a specific TV show or Phone # • -often done with material that you know something about • Eg) telephone directory you already know the name of the person. What else do you know?
